Increasing Personal Property-Liability Market Share

- Reinventing the customer value proposition with innovative products, processes and technology
  - Focused on 4 Elements of Value to leverage existing brand strengths
  - Simplifying products and processes for ease of use

- Improving the customer value proposition by lowering costs
  - Current pricing sophistication, brand strength and go-to-market model have resulted in modest unit growth
  - Costs will be lowered by increasing commonality between brand operations and building an Integrated Digital Enterprise
  - Lower costs will support an improved relative price position while maintaining attractive returns

- The go-to-market business models of the three brands will be modified to execute strategy
  - Products will still be distributed through local captive Allstate agencies, direct (online and call centers) and independent agencies
  - The product management, claims and operating processes for all distribution channels will utilize consistent technology platforms
  - An Integrated Digital Enterprise will lower costs by utilizing data, analytics, technology and process redesign
Allstate’s Operational Strength Enables Business Model Transformation

- Allstate brand auto and homeowners insurance generate attractive returns on capital while growing policies in force
  - Auto insurance underwriting margins are among the best in the industry
    - Lower combined ratio versus industry average generated $1.3 billion of additional underwriting income in 2018
  - Homeowners insurance generates substantial underwriting income over time
    - Lower combined ratio versus industry average generated $750 million of additional underwriting income in 2018
